

Rensselaer County Historical Society is located in two adjacent 19th century townhouses in historic downtown Troy. The Museum's headquarters, the Joseph B. Carr Building, houses our exhibit galleries, meeting room, and research library. The 1827 Federal-style Hart-Cluett House is one of the finest urban historic homes in the United States.

RCHS strives to enrich the present and advocate for the past by bringing the region's past to life, recognizing every face and every story.

We collect, preserve, study, interpret, and make accessible a broad variety of objects and documents and conduct educational programs to inspire public enthusiasm for the past.

RCHS is open Thursday - Saturday, Noon - 5:00 PM, February to December 23rd.
